Abstract

This report encompasses a detailed description of each task undertaken by student five for deliverable D01 of the project. As noted in the annexes, not all tasks require commentary, emphasizing selective analysis where necessary. This analysis is particularly valuable in situations where the client possesses limited technological expertise.

Introduction

In this initial delivery phase, our examination centers around three tasks: one obligatory functional requirement and two optional managerial requirements. Given the straightforward nature of this phase, involving a minor feature implementation and report generation, our analysis is constrained. Hence, we lack sufficient information to conduct an in-depth report of the tasks in this delivery.

The document unfolds in the following manner: this introductory section establishes the context of the report, followed by an analysis of each task in the contents section, if appropriate. Lastly, a brief conclusion will conclude the report.

Contents

Mandatory Deliverables

Functional requirements:

1. Modify the anonymous menu so that it shows an option that takes the browser to the home page of your favourite web site. The title must read as follows: “<id-number>: <surname>, <name>”, where “<id-number>” denotes your DNI, NIE, or passport number, “<surname>” denotes your surname/s, and “<name>” denotes your name/s.

This requirement didn't require any additional inquiry due to its clear delineation of the final objective.

Optional Deliverables

Managerial requirements:

11. Produce an analysis report.

This report constitutes the task under examination; thus, an in-depth analysis wasn't deemed necessary.

12. Produce a planning and progress report.

Given the self-explanatory nature of the requirement, further analysis was deemed unnecessary.

Conclusions

In conclusion, the simplicity of the tasks outlined in this initial delivery phase rendered further evaluation unnecessary.
